BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

CAREER INFORMATION
Business Administration is a study in learning to set organizational goals and formulating procedures to achieve them. To carry out their administrative roles, managers must be able to handle such duties as preparing and administering budgets, monitoring operations, and formulating policies and procedures. Students who choose business administration as their major will become acquainted with management principles and will be able to apply them to specific business areas such as production/operation, finance, human resource management/industrial relations. Academic coursework includes business statistics, investments, management science, human resource management, principles of real estate to name a few. Graduate study is not a requirement for entry-level positions in business. A few career opportunities in this field of study are operations manager, human resource assistant, production manager and real estate broker. Salaries vary widely depending on which career path you choose. Lower-level managers with bachelor of science degrees can expect to earn $30,000 to $50,000. Middle management staff with bachelor’s or master’s degrees in health care administration can earn anywhere from $60,000 to $90,000.
